Dinosaur Bone War: Cope And Marsh's Fossil Feud (Landmark Books)

Synopsis

Edward Drinker Cope was a charming man with a passion for old bones. Othniel Marsh was a stickler for procedure when he studied his fossil finds. They started as friends, sharing ideas and information, but after Marsh tried to poach Cope's digging site, they became bitter enemies. Their decades-long feud fueled their desire to dig up more bones, to discover new species, and to find ever bigger and more unusual dinosaurs. Through their competition, the two men laid a far-reaching foundation for the brand-new field of paleontology. A fascinating story told with an engaging narrative technique, and well complemented by period photographs and drawings, a map, a time line, and an author's note.

Customer Reviews

It is difficult for students who have grown up in the internet and computer age to understand the interplay of field work and turning it into the printed word. Add the fierce rivalry and competition between two brilliant men and you have a story that helps younger students see that scientists often act just like players in recess ball games.
